

Abstract

The invention relates to novel 3-amino pyrrolidine derivatives, as well as methods for modulating calcium channel activity and for treating conditions associated with calcium channel function. In particular, the compounds generally contain at least one benzhydryl moiety, and are useful in treating conditions which benefit from blocking calcium ion channels.